

THE KING'S NARRATOR - Interviewer

INTERVIEWER

So, first, thank you Dr. Bogdan for agreeing to speak with me.

She clears her throat and makes a hand gesture to shoo away the cameraman from being in the frame.

INTERVIEWER

You want me to get a translator? I understand you speak creole Russian.

DR. BOGDAN

It's ok. I speak English well enough.

The interviewer smiles sarcastically and rolls her eyes.

INTERVIEWER

Terrific. Great. Let's get started.

The interviewer shifts in her seat and adjusts her clip mic.

INTERVIEWER

What people have been asking is how do you know so much about the 21st century? Archeologists have been unable to corroborate many of your claims. For starters, there is hardly any evidence that a General King Asilas was as powerful as you say. In fact, some have suggested he was merely a figure head monarch and never conquered the world at all. What do you say to the experts who have publicly debunked your claims?

Dr. Bogdan gives a subtle smirk.

DR. BOGDAN

King Asilas never wanted statues made of him -so if they're looking for such things as relics or monuments or statues, they'll never find any of him. But King Asilas most certainly conquered the world.

The interviewer begins to laugh uncontrollably. Dr. Bogdan looks on unmoved as the young woman tries to compose herself.

INTERVIEWER

But how do you know this? There is no evidence, you understand?
